Description/Objectives

This course examines policy issues at international, national and local levels. It attempts to provide groundwork approaches to non nonprofits, NGOs, and philanthropy. The emphasis is on how philanthropy, nonprofit, and NGO sectors operate, their niche alongside private and public sectors, revenue sources, impact on society, and converse effects of society and its institutions; the policy making process. We will explore the impact of reliance on government or overseas support for Third World NGOs; faith-based service provisions: accountability and transparency; advocacy; and government regulations.

The course will meet once a week in a seminar format. It is a discussion course, and I look for active participation by each student. There will be a reading assignment, not too long, for each week, but I expect close analysis of texts and I look for each student to complete the assignment before class. The basic course requirement is to write a research paper on a topic to be determined in discussion with me. The alternative of an examination will be available for those who prefer, but my strong preference is for one or more research papers.

We will make active use of the Blackboard website prepared for this course.

Books required for purchase are available at Labyrinth Bookstore. The other assigned readings are available on e-reserves.
